The creation of the A.D.Q, which was a Quebec political party active on the provincial scene from 1994 to 2012. It was a party that was advocating for a reform of the Quebec model. The A.D.Q proposed among other things, to reduce the size of the state and to focus public policies on greater freedom of choice for citizens. That's when my interest in politics began.

Mario Dumont is a television host and former Canadian politician. He was the Member of the National Assembly for Rivière-du-Loup from 1994 to 2009 and Leader of the Action démocratique du Québec during the same period. From 2007 to 2008, Dumont served as Leader of the Official Opposition in the National Assembly. He resigned his position as MP and leader of the ADQ following his party's results in the 2008 provincial election. He was not afraid to bring new ideas for the advancement of Quebec. Today, the governing party in Quebec is a continuation of Dumont's A.D.Q

6. What policy in your party's platform do you think matters most to the people in your riding?

We need to make Pontiac an economic force in the Outaouais region. The various incentives put forward by the People's Party of Canada, such as increasing the base amount from $ 12,000 to $ 15,000 and the 15% fixed tax rates between $ 15,000 and $ 100,000, will invite the current worker to work overtime, and will also encourage the young retiree to return to work part time as well as abolishing the interprovincial borders which will alleviate staff shortages until the immigrant workforce is adequately trained.

7. Recent polls suggest many Canadians are disillusioned with politics. If elected, what would you do to address those concerns?

People are disillusioned with politicians, no matter which party is in power the policies remain substantially the same. The People's Party of Canada is not only a Party, it has become a movement where the ideas of the masses become the policies of the Party and the candidates and the Leader their Ambassadors. A party for the people and by the people, That is what the P.P.C is all about.
